Vstoupili jsme do nového věku: věku balónu.
Je to Úsvit balónového věku a nikdo nezůstane bez úhony.
Židovská média jsou oprávněně totálně psychotická, když byla svědkem šokujícího vzestupu balónu.

Suspected Chinese spy balloon triggers diplomatic crisis

The balloon was spotted over Montana. Senior military leaders have advised against shooting it down.

Analysis: Balloon comes at precarious time in US-China relations

Státní tajemník, který je Žid, byl nucen zrušit svou cestu do Pekingu. Když dostal zprávu o balónu, řekl svému řidiči: „Otoč toho hajzla! Máme na rukou balon!“
Bohužel, řidič byl černý, prudce zatočil a převrátil kamion.
Je to vůbec skutečné?

Tento velmi vážný muž uspořádal v pátek velmi vážnou nouzovou tiskovou konferenci, aby informoval veřejnost o Úsvitu balónového věku.

Existuje určitá otázka, zda jsme skutečně vstoupili do věku balónů. Balon nebyl prozkoumán a Čína tvrdí, že jde o civilní plavidlo, které bylo vyhozeno z kurzu. V podstatě tito lidé viděli balón nad Montanou a začali totální šílenství s 24/7 zpravodajstvím o Rise of the Balloon a tvrdili, že to byl Dawn of the Balloon Age. Ale jde o to: nad Montanou se rozsvítil balónový věk. Montana není na hranici s Čínou.

Představa, že by se tento balón mohl dostat tak daleko do vzdušného prostoru USA, aniž by si toho někdo všiml, mi připadá směšná. Zdá se mnohem pravděpodobnější, že věděli o balónu a věděli, že to ve skutečnosti nebyl špionážní balón a nechali ho chvíli klouzat, než ho přinesli médiím.

Tucker Carlson Sucks

Ve čtvrtek Tucker Carlson informoval o Dawn of the Balloon Age a byl to pravděpodobně jediný nejretardovanější segment, jaký jsem ho kdy viděl dělat. Tenhle chlápek prostě nasere prdel. Je posedlý snahou dostat USA do války s Čínou a jediný důvod, proč je proti válce s Ruskem, je ten, že chce, aby byly zdroje použity proti Číně. Kňučel, že ten velmi vážný špionážní balón nebyl okamžitě sestřelen. Nezpochybňoval absolutně nic o oficiálních zprávách o tomto balónu. Nezeptal se, jak je možné, že balón této velikosti vstoupí do vzdušného prostoru USA a cestuje, pravděpodobně celé týdny, přes severozápad USA, aniž by si toho někdo všiml. Místo toho začal říkat, že je třeba okamžitě sestřelit, a řekl, že jediný důvod, proč to Bidenova administrativa odmítá sestřelit, je ten, že chtějí pomoci čínskému špionovi na americké rakety. Právě jsem vyplivl svůj sendvič s tuňákem po celé obrazovce.

Odkaz na video

Vláda tvrdí, že ho nemohou sestřelit, protože by vytvořilo příliš mnoho trosek. Nezmínil se, že to je to, co říkají, a místo toho řekl, že neexistuje žádný jiný důvod než to, že americká vláda – která se v současné době snaží rozpoutat válku s Číňany – je ve spojení s Číňany. Toto vyprávění prostě nedává žádný smysl a mělo by urážet každého, kdo sleduje show tohoto muže.

Tento příběh, který prosazuje, že Bidenova administrativa – která v současné době létá s válečnými letadly do a z čínského vzdušného prostoru a pluje válečné lodě tam a zpět přes Tchajwanský průliv – tajně pracuje pro Číňany, není udržitelný. Je to prostě příliš hloupé. Americká vláda je stejně nepřátelská vůči Číňanům jako vůči Rusku – představte si, že by Tucker Carlson tvrdil, že Biden je ovládán Ruskem. Bylo by to rozumné?

Právě teď říká: „Jsem ještě více CNN než CNN! CNN nezachází dost daleko!“ Neexistuje ale žádné vysvětlení, proč CNN vůbec prosazuje válku s Číňany, pokud tajně pracují pro Číňany.

Ví, jak je to hloupé, a využívá zranitelného diváka, který má pocit, že mu může věřit. Není nic nemocnějšího, než lákat lidi dovnitř a nutit je, aby si mysleli, že jste na jejich straně, že jste jejich přítel, takže je pak můžete zatlačit do světové války pro globalisty.

Ve skutečnosti to, co udělal, když jim řekl, že je to „láska“ pro muže strkat pěstí do řitního otvoru jiného muže, bylo ve skutečnosti horší. Ale je to to samé: zneužívání důvěry k podlým účelům.

Zkusme zde být dospělí

Nejpravděpodobnějším vysvětlením balónu je, že je to přesně to, co Čína říká, že je: výzkumná loď, která se v tryskovém proudu odklonila od kurzu.

Dá se také s jistotou předpokládat, že USA viděly plavidlo dlouho předtím, než vstoupilo do vzdušného prostoru USA, a nechaly ho jen tak jet, aby mohly později přijít s tímto veřejným šílenstvím.

Všechno na tomhle vypadá jako totálně vyrobená událost.

Není překvapením, že přesně to, co jsem vám řekl, se stane: Řekl jsem vám, že pokud začnou likvidovat ukrajinskou válku, najednou by se obrátili na Čínu s různými vysoce sledovanými hysterickými příběhy, aby vyprávění posunuli dál. kapitulaci Rusku.

The military says they haven't shot it down because the pieces might hit someone below! So considerate of them.

However, the balloon is over Montana, one of the most SPARSELY populated states in the country. There's next to zero chance of hitting anything other than rocks or plants.

Why not shoot a dart into the balloon? Why do they have to use a missile? Or use one of those planes that can fly over the balloon and scoop it up, which would let them see what instruments are on board before returning it to the Chinese.

Something doesn't sound kosher here.

“It's also safe to assume that the US saw the vessel long before it entered US airspace, and just let it ride so they could later come out with this public freakout.

Everything about this looks like a totally manufactured event.

Unsurprisingly, this is exactly what I told you would happen: I told you that if they were going to start winding down the Ukraine war, they would all of the sudden pivot to China with various high-profile hysteria stories to move the narrative away from the surrender to Russia.”

A perfect analysis.

Thank you kindly.

| It's also safe to assume that the US saw the vessel long before it entered US airspace

All the line troops in the Regime are impressively, even stupendously incompetent, so no it is not safe to assume that.

If you want to run with this line, you have to do this: actually, weather balloons – or even military balloons – sneak into American airspace all the time, like nearly once a month. However, they normally don't say anything because it's embarrassing.

This bad habit, as it turns out, can be usefully exploited.

Similarly, ~150 black men are killed by white men a year, but it only shows up in the news when they want to do a BLM.

No doubt the Chinese have resorted to balloon terrorism because they obviously must not have spy satellites that can spy on our missiles. Everyone knows the Chinese are too stupid to make spy satellites. I think even their trains still run on steam power.

Update: Photos of the balloon show that the balloon has “Eat at Wong’s” printed on the side.

I don't get this at all, China has their own satellites why do they need this? And even if the war porn experts give whatever the technical reason is that this balloon can take images that the satellite cannot, it should be incredibly easy to bribe the very diverse and corrupt population in the USA to get information on military base secrets.

I don't see why there's all this fuss about a balloon. This completely ignores the reality that nations have had, for decades, satellites circling the globe to spy on each other with incredible precision. A balloon – BFD.

For example, what do you think this organization, among many others, is doing?

I don't know that we should just assume that they've been tracking the balloon for weeks. I find it entirely possible that they never noticed it until it was over Montana

In the late 80's German teenager with 50 hours of flying experience rented Cessna single-engine plane and flew it through supposedly invincible Soviet air defences to land in the middle of Moscow. Not exactly undetected – he was spotted at various times, but the system failed on the whole.

More recently a drone from the Ukrainian conflict somehow ended up flying through large part of NATO airspace to finally crash in Zagreb, Croatia. Again, it was spotted on occasions, but the system on the whole failed to do anything about it as it went by.

In conclusion, there is no need for conspiracy theories when simple incompetence provides sufficient explanation.

I once saw an Army Sergeant Major, with a Combat Infantryman's Badge with two stars atop it, indicating that he fought as an infantryman in WW2, Korea, and Vietnam. On his right shoulder was his overseas unit patch, showing that he'd been in Merrill's Marauders, a WW2 behind-the-Japanese-lines commando outfit. He had a mere four rows of ribbons, including the Medal of Honor. (I hesitated to include that because I don't want to seem over-the-top, but it's true.)

What did that One Star General do to merit eight rows of medals?

How many more rows when he gets more stars?

Is this Clown World?

Watch the Tucker clip. At about 23 minutes into the Tucker clip. Right there! You morons let bitches vote. You let them leave the kitchen where they should be cooking delicious meals from scratch; wiping baby's asses, listening in on the kids' classrooms – unannounced, etc.

That bunch there, God! Reminds me of a drama scene we were treated to by my dear (then perimenopausal) Mom where (in front of us devout Catholic kids, forced to go to Catechism right through the 12th grade) she got down on her knees in full out Joan Crawford style she prayed to God to strike her dead..."Please God ...strike me dead!" (right in front of us kids) because [wait for this] she had caught my 10 yr old brother using dad's razor pretending to shave his face and you know what? (years later she admitted to me) she was honestly totally mortified by the prospect that that kid would wake up the next morning with a full beard! And she'd have to send that kid to school the next morning with a flowing beard! Agggh! What would the neighbors say?

As I can clearly see they aren't any different today. Just a different hairdo (or lack of hair like that one freaks in there) and simplified make-up, different clothes; and most importantly ball-less sissie men, I'd hesitate to even call "men."

What a chink lover this midget is. Anglin, stay in exile please.

The reason the military hasn't shot this surveillance balloon down is because it would be a show of force that sends the message that the military is concerned with the homeland and in turn, middle America. It's the same reason the federal government has done nothing to prevent the landslide of wetbacks across our southern border. It's the same reason the military will defend sexual deviancy in its ranks but not outspoken conservative or nationalist sentiment.

The military leadership and those in Washington actively hate this nation, even to the point that they can't pretend to defend its airspace.

From former CIA guy Larry Johnson.

<https://sonar21.com/sturm-und-drang-and-chinese-balloons/>

...Let me start with this question — what is the difference between a Chinese spy balloon flying at 55 miles above the earth collecting intelligence via sensors and cameras and Chinese spy satellite flying at 70 miles above the earth collecting intelligence with sensors and cameras? Simply a matter of altitude.

Currently there is a de facto assumption by most nations that the line dividing earth atmosphere from space is 60 miles above the earth:

Until now, most scientists have said that outer space is 100 kilometers away (i.e., 60 miles). At that point, it's been thought, the speed needed to achieve lift in the super thin atmosphere is equal to the speed needed to simply orbit the planet; once there, a spacecraft's horizontal pace would counteract the tug of Earth's gravity. It's an insight that has long been credited to aerodynamics pioneer Theodore von Kármán, though he credited the term to the world's first "space lawyer," Andrew Haley, in 1963.

<https://www.science.org/content/article/outer-space-may-have-just-gotten-bit-closer>

The Karman line is a bit of an artificial construct. It is not clearly delineated like a geographic border separating countries.

The Kármán line (or von Kármán line /vɒn ˈkɑːrmɑːn/)[2] is an attempt to define a boundary between Earth's atmosphere and outer space, and offers a specific definition set by the Fédération aéronautique internationale (FAI), an international record-keeping body for aeronautics. . . . International law does not define the edge of space, or the limit of national airspace.

(https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/K%C3%A1rm%C3%A1n_line)

At present, the United States, Russia and China tolerate their adversaries satellites flying over their territory scooping up intel. As long as it is in space, satellites freely collect and no nation pitches a fit (yet) or threatens to shoot down the satellites (yet)...

Yes, I thought of that too.

The Japanese Fu-Go balloons were the most terrifying weapons of WWII. The gods of the Pacific winds were looking out for us, otherwise our cities would have been fried and our war factories would have been devastated.

It was like that scene in 300 — Zeus stabbed the sky with lightning and the balloons popped harmlessly over the water — except for a few; yes there were casualties. But don't say we weren't being protected... not to mentioned warned.

Why is there no department of Balloon Defense even now? I ask you.

The Chinese are trolling the US. We shoot it down, and then they say, “What’s the difference between a balloon near space and satellites in LEO or the VLEO that DARPA wants to populate with satellites?”

There’s no legal definition defining the upward limit of a country’s airspace. Shooting down a balloon at that altitude kind of makes it OK to start knocking out the other guys’ satellites.

OTOH, maybe this was a slow balloon from China, delivering Hunter’s millions and the Big Guy’s ten percent. That might explain Mr. Biden’s reluctance to shoot it down.

OMG!!! The Chinamen have BALLOONS!!!!

Thank the good Lord they don't have satellites that can take high rez pics and gather other info. They're not collecting intelligence because, based on what I've heard from "officials", "journalists" and citizens, there is none here to collect. Now, quit thinking about Ukraine, Hunter Biden and anything else that might upset the globalist apple cart.

Chairman Xi Jinping is a big 5th Dimension fan. We were chatting on the phone the other night, and I swear the man was lit up; I sure as hell was. Anyhooo, he was telling me that the CCP is way high, if you pardon the expression, on bringing the Age of Aquarius truly into reality. I said, “Xi, my man, you’re a dollar short and about 50 years too late on that one.” He said, “Listen.” And when the man says listen, I am all ears: the Professor ain’t no dummy. “The Chinese balloon is an invitation, as in the song, to your whole country. Hear the words, bourgeois though they may be, but still nice: ‘The world’s a nicer place in my beautiful balloon, It wears a nicer face in my beautiful balloon,’ etc. etc. etc.” Nice! Thank you, Jimmy Webb. I listened to the song again for first time in 45 years, and I could see, with a couple of simple word changes, what the man was getting at. Peace, baby. Harmony, love. Let’s all get along and do some trading. The Professor has been into the flowers-in-your- hair scene since WWII, check it out. Leave it to the killjoys to turn a Chinese lovefest invitation into a Sino version of the Ride of the Valkyries!

If it is a spy balloon, how is it supposed to get its data back to China? By satellite? What satellite? Where is it? Or will it beam the data over the horizon to Chinese ELINT planes? Those planes would have to be flying at the edge of the atmosphere to be over the horizon to a balloon in the middle of the North American continental landmass. It makes no sense.

Ninety-nine red balloons
Floating in the summer sky
Panic bells, it's red alert!
There's something here from somewhere else!
The war machine springs to life
Opens up one eager eye
Focusing it on the sky
When ninety-nine red balloons go by

99 Decision Street
Ninety-nine ministers meet
Worry, worry, super-scurry
Call the troops out in a hurry
This is what we've waited for
This is it, boys, this is war
The president is on the line
As ninety-nine red balloons go by

‘The most likely explanation for the balloon is that it is exactly what China says it is: a research vessel that drifted off course in the jet stream.’ — Andrew Anglin

Yep, that’s the most likely explanation.

Moreover, if it were a spy balloon, then likely the US would shoot it down for intel purposes.

That it’s still flying suggests it’s a plain old weather balloon, transmitting data in the clear which the US already has logged and analyzed.

Pertinent question: what is all this overwrought silver balloon drama intended to distract us from? Has Bahkmut fallen? Or “Joe Biden”?

How about this 'powerful take' ... look at the balloon's payload, it appears to be an ordinary satellite this is how satellites in general might be flying, if the earth was flat ... some think this is why they don't shoot it down ... we have an accidental 'reveal' by a balloon that drifted low enough to be photographed, so global powers now join in 'damage control' ... China playing along that it is their 'weather satellite off course' which brings to mind this remarkable man, the only Polish citizen to have travelled in space, and what he said late in life, English subtitles in video below

Asked if 'earth is really a sphere in outer space', Polish national hero, General Mirosław Hermaszewski (1941-2022), who had flown on the Soviet Soyuz 30 spacecraft in 1978, replied:

"Earth is flat ... as some expect ... I assure you: It's flat."

Rest in peace, brave General ... courageous in speech as well as in flight

Reminds me of a drama scene we were treated to by my dear (then perimenopausal) Mom where (in front of us devout Catholic kids, forced to go to Catechism right through the 12th grade) she got down on her knees in full out Joan Crawford style she prayed to God to strike her dead... "Please God ...strike me dead!" (right in front of us kids) because [wait for this] she had caught my 10 yr old brother using dads razor pretending to shave his face and you know what? (years later she admitted to me) she was honestly totally mortified by the prospect that that kid would wake up the next morning with a full beard! And she'd have to send that kid to school the next morning with a flowing beard! Aggggh! What would the neighbors say?

Some might question the truth of this memory, but I'm afraid it's all too similar to my own mother's behavior, both in the extremity of the reaction and the idiocy of the provocation. I've always thought she was uniquely stupid, but perhaps she's just an average woman? No! I will not believe this!

Is it a Catholic thing? Although my mother was only a convert, not a cradle Catholic.

...if they were going to start winding down the Ukraine war, they would all of the sudden pivot to China with various high-profile hysteria stories to move the narrative away from the surrender to Russia

The US has now tried to surrender to Russia twice – “offering” the Russians ~20% of Ukraine, a DMZ, and a Nuland-clad ‘guarantee’ that Ukraine won’t be admitted to NATO or the EU.

Both times, Russia has made it clear that they see no point in negotiating with the Empire of Lies... and that they’ll stop destroying the US’s satrapy on their doorstep when they feel like it.

The reality is that the US is shit-scared that the Russians will take Odessa, leaving Rump Ukraine landlocked – which would give BlackRock no port from which to export the grain grown on the land they’ve just bought.

Note to people who were skeptical about the sale of vast tracts of land in Ukraine – specifically to BlackRock – when it was first raised in these pages: sucks to be as wrong as you.

Up next... the extra humiliation of anyone who was skeptical about the Russian claim of US-funded biowarfare labs in Ukraine.

It looks like the balloon was launched in central China, proceeded east over South Korea and Japan, then north over Alaska, then southeast over Canada. The balloon has been in the air for about 2 weeks and has been tracked by civilian and military air traffic authorities.

My question is why did the government wait to announce the presence of the balloon until it was over the continental US? They could have announced a week ago that a Chinese balloon will be traversing the continental US and avoided all this hoopla.

Yes, the flat earth trajectory. That is more or less a straight line. On the globe map it looks weird and counterintuitive which is why people are confused.

The guy who said how can they monitor these balloons over the horizon? There is no horizon as such is the answer. Planes can receive signals from hundreds of miles.

These balloons are where the so called “satellite” information comes from.

The balloon would ordinarily be at a higher altitude. Perhaps the ineptness of the Chinese are fucking up the satellite game. Now supposedly they found another one in South America. Seems strange for the government to want to risk exposing this for some cheap China scare points. Maybe a new line of Chinese balloons are malfunctioning.

Normally I don't even glance at this author's output. Because this is an interesting current story, I made an exception, and already regret it.

“The Jewish media is rightfully going totally psycho...”
and “The Secretary of State, who is Jewish...”

He didn't forget to reference the Dirty Stupid and Dangerous N*gger theme either.

“Unfortunately, the driver was black, and he made a sharp u-turn and flipped the truck.”

Maybe this essay was rushed because I saw no praise for The Führer or any Holocaust Denial. Maybe next time...

Looking for some 'meaty' stuff, I found a trashing of the ambitious and dishonest Tucker Carlson. That part was OK, but what about the balloon?

The most likely explanation for the balloon is that it is exactly what China says it is: a research vessel that drifted off course in the jet stream.

Now we get into opinions, but mine is that's the least likely 'explanation'.

The US has been deliberately taunting, baiting, and trashing China in every possible way, and this is at the minimum a little bit of payback.

Larry Johnson has another interesting interpretation at his blog:

STURM UND DRANG AND CHINESE BALLOONS

<https://sonar21.com/sturm-und-drang-and-chinese-balloons/>

I think the Chinese are testing the definition of what constitutes acceptable overhead surveillance and may be trying to create a predicate for destroying our satellites if we go after their balloons. The United States has long resisted any legal definition of outer space to avoid restrictions on high-altitude military activities. Advances on the technological front involving satellites and other aerial collection systems has created a very murky area that is not defined by law or treaty when it comes to intelligence collection. At least none that I am aware of.

The Chinese were basically daring us to shoot down their balloon. Old Warmongering Joe was about to do just that until cooler heads prevailed.

The excuse that falling debris could hurt somebody in Montana was about as silly as it gets, for the population density there is extremely low. Giving the Chinese an excuse to start taking pot shots at US satellites just wasn't worth the momentary satisfaction of a balloon take-down.

That's a shame. I recall watching a PBS documentary a couple years back on vintage train tours you can take around the U.S. One line (somewhere in Appalachia) had to repair their century-old steam locomotive but no longer had the means to do so, so they shipped it to China to have it refurbished. Too bad the Chinese, too, seem to be abandoning this classic technology.

Why would you shoot something down when you don't know for sure what is inside it? Could be chemicals for all we know.

For sure, they did know about it long before it reached MT. They only started talking about it openly when people could see it – Montana is known as the “big sky country” state.

This thing is projected to pass through N. Carolina.

If the US Military seriously does not know what is in it or trust China's explanation, then waiting until it's over the Atlantic Ocean might be the best place to take it down.

Agreed and also keep in mind that Brigadier General Patrick Ryder said yesterday that the Pentagon has been tracking this balloon for “several days”. With a traveling speed up to 70mph, several days ago would put it out over the Pacific Ocean (which is 500 miles from Montana) when first tracked, nullifying their bs excuse as to why they’ve not shot it down. If they didn’t shoot it over the ocean then they never had any intention to stop it.

A balloon ALWAYS travels with the wind. And it travels at the speed of the wind. Everybody spills ink over that thing, nobody ha any idea how high this floats. I remember once during my flying years having seen one over bay of Biscay. I was at 37 000 feet and the big balloon was reported to be 31 000 feet higher so way above any air traffic. A decade or more ago there was a competition to circumnavigate the earth in a balloon One contestant intended to travel between 60 an 70 thousand feet of course in a pressurised gondola.

Educate yourself about the Japanese balloon bombing campaign during WW II

Maybe , the Chinese or Americans are both checking the wind currents in the Americas because they know that the Pentagon has been using weather weapons throughout the world. They are also /possibly be checking the radiation levels since Bob Nickols website keeps track of the Rads in the US. Bob says Montana's Rads are off the scales because of all the nuclear contamination west of Montana.Or maybe they are checking Fukushima fallout at the same time. China would probably have more than one scientific balloon , for sure. Time will tell .

Fascist yank spy balloons float 90,000 feet over China...so? So the Chinese float at 45,000 over the US... The implications is that the Chinese want the US to take the bait and shoot down the "weather ballon" (which it may well be)...thus creating the "authorization" for China to shoot down the fascist's spy balloons.

The people need to be distracted from the situation in Ukraine. It won't do for the Biden regime to lose another war so all hands are now on deck to find anything to use as distraction and this balloon just happened to fit that.

It won't be shot down because it needs to stay up there so no one talks about why NATO tanks and fighter jets are suddenly going to Ukraine, or why a large part of the Ukrainian government just quit before fleeing the country.

Balloon mania will last as long as it can so NATO can march it weapons and troops up against Russia and then cry wolf on TV when they get shot at by the Russian army for being too close to their border.

Balloons are extremely stealthy and cost-efficient. Satellites are neither.

Once a satellite is up you don't even need to track it – you can calculate its orbit and simply have the computer tell you where it is right now.

For the most part you put up a satellite for clout. Makes the Joneses gnash their teeth. If you want to get work done, use a balloon.

I am afraid Andrew Anglin, Tucker Carlson and the whole Mainstream media, have shown themselves to be militarily illiterate, by blaming the poor Chinese commie scum, for this declaration of war!

What they are looking at is not Chinese, but a heavy bomber of the Air-force of Haiti, called Wakanda's Revenge!

The reason why they did not shoot it down, is simple. They can't!

Unnamed sources say, it is suspected to have the same advanced technology in it, like Rover (the floating white balloon) from the 1967 British television program The Prisoner.

“No org can get a closer look at said satellite/ballon? Even with a drone? Fishy”

It's somewhere between 80,000 and 120,000 feet AFAIK, very few planes can get up there without a rocket. Do the US still have the Martin RB57F, basically an English Electric Canberra with YUGE wings, used to be used for research and as a spyplane? I think they could do 60-70,000+ feet altitude. NASA apparently still had 3 in 2021.

Of course all the cameras and spy kit will be on the wrong side (underside) of the plane! Not sure I'd fancy flying one upside down.

Northern USA did just get hit with a record Arctic front. That is when Arctic cold air moves southward. The jet streams (two in northern hemisphere and two in southern hemisphere?) lie above the polar front which also moves southward in winter (N. Hem). It makes perfect sense that the balloon entered US airspace with the polar jet stream. Doesn't mean it wasn't planned though. The Arctic cold front snap was predicted ten days out on my weather app.

Questions: Is China claiming the balloon? Where do they say it took off from? Any chance it will crash land in Roswell, New Mexico... again?

Well, folks, here's a DIFFERENT take on that naughty balloon over Montana...

<https://realrawnews.com/2023/02/white-hats-montana-balloon-was-deep-state-not-chinese/>

IOW, it's not Chinese, it's one of "ours"!

I guess that would make it a Transgender Balloon...

To be fair, that seems like about as plausible an explanation as any other – it has all the key angles of the narrative covered.

The only real hard reservation I have about this particular take on the balloon story is that I have doubts about the veracity and credibility of the Real Raw News web site.

Reason being, any hard questions or even awkward observations, based on verifiable real world information, deposited into the forums there get deleted forthwith – so they're running a controlled echo chamber at Real Raw News, with a whole horde of fanboy patriots captured in the forums there.

To be fair, Real Raw News spins a riveting web of Black Hat vs White Hat narratives worthy of an epic espionage novel or maybe a poor man's James Bond series. When you take a step back and get properly oriented, though, IMO it's more than likely a psyop counter-info site.

A balloon flying over missile sites? Are they serious? A balloon goes where the wind wants to take it – you can't steer it. Ask any hot air balloon enthusiast. If it is filming missile sites in Montana, the state must be full of them. Incidentally, before the advent of the airplane, militaries used balloons to spy on their enemies – they were probably tethered to keep them from drifting with the wind. Today, they use satellites that can read license plates on cars on the ground – I doubt that the Chinese need to use WWI technology

There has been a suggestion that it is extremely difficult to shoot a high altitude balloon with conventionally designed weapons. Very little radar signature, zero thermal signature, basically invisible to most of our weapons.

Attempting to shoot it and failing will provide too much information to the enemy.

This is hilarious, while at the same time a textbook example of narrative control. Last night ABC Gnuze blathered on and on about the unprecedented once-in-a-lifetime blast of frigid arctic air pouring down into the country, and then without skipping a beat dismissed the possibility that the balloon could have been caught in this weather pattern and blown off course. Sometimes their lies are so blatant, it's like they are slapping us in the face with their contempt for our gullibility.

Notice also how the narrative immediately devolved into: should we shoot it down over land, or over sea? While our hero Senile Jo sagely determines the safety of the citizens below must come first. We are not allowed to consider whether "we" should "shoot it down" at all, or accept for a second that the Chinese government might be offering a credible explanation. Blinken then bravely cancels what the media grimly termed "a high-stakes trip" to China, doubtless in manly defiance of yet another fiendish scheme of those demonic yet clumsy red rascals. Thank goodness that resolute soul is on duty against the typically sly, Oriental malevolence that would steal our freedom, so the story goes.

Can't wait to see what's next. One might be optimistic and think the spinmeisters are so demoralized about the coming Ukraine embarrassment that they can't think up more a more well thought out dinner of horse manure to serve us.

A weather balloon makes total sense because satellites can't monitor high-altitude wind speed and air temperature, you need sensors floating in the medium to do that. A spy balloon in lieu of a spy satellite of course makes zero sense, as you have stated.

The Chinese have found the weak spot in our national defense! Our oceans protect us from their tanks, we can intercept their aircraft and missiles, but there is no way to stop their balloons!

. . . Not really a joke when you consider that with the balloons costing about one thousand dollars a pop (sorry), they could send a million balloons toward America for just one billion dollars. Most of them would be decoys with just bricks for ballast, but maybe one out of ten thousand would carry a tactical-nuke-tipped drone programmed to attack once it's over the US mainland.

There are so many permutations to the game of global thermonuclear war that maybe the only way to win is not to play.

On Thursday, Tucker Carlson reported on the Dawn of the Balloon Age, and it was probably the single most retarded segment I've ever seen him do. This guy just sucks ass. He's obsessed with trying to get the US into a war with China, and the only reason he is against the war with Russia is that he wants the resources to be used against China.

I have been saying this for a long time, there is something wrong with Carlson's narratives. Those who think Carlson is speaking truth to power are full of crap. His shtick is to denigrate China and let others criticize Russia. He is as much a Deep State operative as all other MSM.

All the bullshit about the balloon being guided over the missile silos in Montana and that it hovered over different areas is beyond belief. Balloons go where the wind takes them.

HUH ?? What a dumb thing to say. It looks like the only balloon we need to be concerned about here is the one on the author's shoulders.

In any case, as I said and as so many on UR know, it was only a matter of time before we had another "drama". Lets see:

- >Covid and the endless trotting out of Variants
- >Russia collusion
- >Alleged election fraud
- >Immigration and inflation
- >War in Ukraine
- >Hunter's whoring, doping and corruption with the Big Guy
- >"Top Secret" documents found all over the place

Sadly, the public tends to lose interest in the latest disaster. We cannot have that ! But what could we come up with to keep the American moles on their toes ???

Hmmmm. Yeah, CHINESE BALLOONS. Time to start biting those nails and get out the tranquilizers.

Continual mental battering . The average citizen, faced with endless obstacles (inflation, food shortages etc) and brought up to expect American Utopia is now subjected to and expected to absorb this continual bullshit.

Its no wonder we have so many people with mental and drug problems.

NB: I find it odd that with satellites all over the place which can detect Dr Gill plucking her pussy bush, that the Chinese are going to send a balloon over the US. But hey, what do I know. At least in the scheme of things they can claim their contribution to civilization was chopsticks, the fortune cookie, the sedan chair, paper lanterns and now balloons. But wait, they have now discovered a second balloon. What the fuck ! I am going back to hiding under my bed ! I am out of fentanyl. Gotta call my Nigger Le M”arcus for a home delivery.

Missiles need something to lock onto. This thing is very high and has no combustion for heat seekers and very little if any radar signature(my guess). A blast was herd over Billings this AM. A covey of choppers left Bozeman headed east about the same time (Hal Turner). Stay tuned. Montana is sparsely populated vast open grasslands north and east of Billings(Been there many times). The people get all excited about a Chinese balloon and yet the ZUS government is spraying the world with chemtrails and their white trails containing nano particles of aluminum and barium and strontium are seen almost every day in the skies of Montana and throughout the world and no body says a word about this weather warfare operation that has been going on for decades, at least since 1988 by my own observation, here in Montana, people have their eyes wide shut. They hit the chemtrails with their HAARP micro wave heaters and move weather fronts creating floods, droughts, hurricanes, tornadoes, hailstorms , etc., in targeted areas.

The government is not concerned about the UFO's that have hovered over missile silos here in Montana and have actually disabled the launch codes on these missiles, see the book Mystery Stalks the Prairie by the late Montana Sheriff Keith Wolverton, that documents these events, this book can be had on amazon, I have this book, but no one talks about the UFO's that are disabling the launch codes on missiles, and this has gone on in Wyoming and other states.

The people have their eyes wide shut.

This brand new balloon technology is a GREAT threat to the corn farmers of Norteamerica. It could be collapsed in a moment and smother half an acre or more of emerging corn or bean plants.

Nevertheless, Boeing and General Dynamics have foreseen the advent of this new technology. They have plans on the drawing boards for a buildout of balloon defense weaponry that may take a couple of years and several prototypes to perfect. The cost is now estimated at somewhere under a trillion dollars over five years, subject to adjustments as technical problems arise. They have also had the foresight to position balloon defense factories in a half dozen districts now safely held by members of the Republican Congressional leadership.

Don't be concerned. This new threat will be met by all the usual measures.

The Pentagon and the Intel agencies have war-gamed this. If a player or two should suddenly face-plant a la Damar Hamlin during the Super Bowl, the cameras are to cut away immediately to talking heads in DC and NY and to create the maximum level of 9/11-style hysteria inspired by the Global Balloon War about to launch any minute now.

When I first heard the reporting on the balloon, I thought it was much ado about nothing and might not be in the earth's atmosphere (if that's possible) and in that case, there would be nothing wrong with it. Anyway, I assumed it was a bogus story. I enjoy Tucker's show, maybe because by comparison the rest of American TV news reporting is an endless stream of lies and disinformation by boring and unattractive morons. But besides Tucker's reporting on the balloon, I turn my attention to something else when he starts talking about Martians or other aliens landing on earth. I'll start paying attention when they have real evidence.

Andrew is a real talent – very funny.

“The Secretary of State, who is Jewish, was forced to cancel his trip to Beijing. When he got word of the balloon, he told his driver: “turn this motherfucker around! We've got a balloon on our hands!”

Unfortunately, the driver was black, and he made a sharp u-turn and flipped the truck.”

After reading the first paragraph, I laughed out loud for about 20 seconds, and then he followed it up with the politically incorrect second part. LOL.

Raytheon beat them to the punch. Raytheon's anti-balloon balloon (ABB) has been in the works for a couple of years and will be ready by next year. The project is estimated to cost about 500 billion dollars. The ABB is a state of the art balloon with tungsten spikes and lithium battery powered fans for mobility. The tungsten spikes can penetrate most surfaces including Chinese balloons which are suspected to have anti-puncture technology. The spikes upon puncturing a balloon will turn the sharp tip into a claw to prevent the deflated balloon from destroying crops below.

It's wrong to just let this thing go, but I can see why they would not take it down while over Continental USA. They are talking now of doing what I had said they would likely do; wait until it's over the Atlantic and then take it down for analysis.

I don't like either party – they've become more and more a uni-party. But I think they are doing right thing (this time) to get it over land before taking it down.

We don't know what's in it; probably nothing but why take the chance. I'm sure the Chinese are testing waters but nobody needs to be foolish and shoot it down over land.

Scaring the American people is always welcomed at the Pentagon.

It would be funnier if this wasn't such a pathetic pivot. Now I see top stories about a similar balloon in South America. Apparently it's even scarier than people singing songs and walking between velvet ropes after being let in to the capitol building by police.

We don't even deserve to have believable lies for our military "interventions" anymore. And true to form, these articles have thousands of comments on them where everyone gets to rile each other up about China.

Even if the balloon had some deadly payload and was an actual threat it would also show how incompetent/malicious our leadership is.

Feeling bad for violent Muslims picking cotton didn't work so now we're treated to scary Chinese balloon technology.

@A Competent Physicist

Yes, so I have heard once my self from a physicist at Cal Tech. There would however be some practical problems...such as a cardinal principle about avoiding any possibility of the gadget being lost or captured. Similarly, a fail-safe bomb, designed to trigger if lost or captured might be pretty bad too... going bang in wrong place...remembering that the ultimate goal is political and that the problem generally with violence is the unpredictability of political effects. Still, people act according to their character and their perceptions...which are sometimes of a low quality... stuff happens.

Best!

My take. CHINA tells Winkin Nod not to come. This greatly embarrasses him and US.

Biden says lets make up a good story. Balloon does not exist therefore can't shoot it down, no debris. China confused knows it didn't send spy balloon but assumes USA is telling the truth so thinks it must be a weather balloon. Winkin-Nod now has reason to cancel trip. Problem solved.

Yeah you're right, "something doesn't seem kosher here" It's all nothing but intentionally generated hysteria just in time to get Ukraine off the front page. Do you or anyone else with common sense really think China needs a goddamned balloon to spy on the US? They have satellites as well as listening posts and human intel on the ground in the US just as they always have. Just as Russia always has just as we alternately in their case always have. The US is falling apart. Many videos of how bad US cities are becoming. Homeless camps lining roads and highways, drugged out people roaming the streets. The same media who continuously foster racial animosity and resentments are also working to foster support for the continuous warfare state. Just heard yet another moronic clown from NATO saying we need to "militarize our economies" In other words, the only jobs left particularly for young people will be either in the military itself as cannon fodder for their 'forever wars' or working in weapons production. The West destroys itself and the peace and prosperity of it's own nations and people, sets up a police/surveillance system against it's own people and simultaneously foments wars across the globe. Yeah, I'll support that won't you? Ra Ra. The Western world in general and America specifically has become demented. Sick nations with a sick people. Brains racked from stress and propaganda and barely being able to even afford housing. But goddamnit, we gotta get those Chinese! We gotta stop those Russians! We must close the balloon gap! Throw another trillion on the fire!

Of course, there is the possibility that we outsource even our balloon production to China, along with everything else, and this is just a routine delivery.

Another possibility is that the Chinese were using the balloon as a novel way of making a cash drop to one of the Bidens – any one of the Bidens – but Delaware is kind of tricky to hit when you're at the mercy of the prevailing winds.

| Balloons were used by the Navy to protect coastlines and convoys for real.

Yep.

Knew a retired Naval aviator who began his years on a blimp, and swore they were the best and cheapest protection the fleet ever had. No fleet protected by blimps ever lost a ship. That was their motto and I can't find any evidence it was wrong.

He was furious in 1961 when Jack Kennedy caved to the oil companies and mothballed the blimp fleet. From then on all patrol squadrons were fixed wing and used tons of expensive av-gas. I was told that a whole blimp squadron could run for a year on what a patrol plane used on every flight. Right or wrong, the lighter-than-air guys never forgave JFK for killing off blimps after a perfect record during WWII.

Overhead surveillance has not required atmospheric balloon deployments for decades. The satellite resolution (even in Chinese systems) provides anything real-time information they want.

The USA has SO very many military bases that it would be hard to find a place where a balloon would NOT be ‘over’ one or more. You gotta love the filthy, but typical, hypocrisy of the USA, that has ringed China with bases, flies up and down just off China’s coast, gaining intelligence, has satellites and probably the old U2s and SR71s still active, yet China is the ‘aggressor’. Not to mention the debt the federal government keeps piling up, which has turned them into debt slaves indentured to the depraved ziophilic empire.

@Priss Factor

I was a huge Star Wars fan when I was a kid (the original trilogy anyway, the prequels I actually did like as an adolescent and I was actually disappointed by Episode III which was actually the only “good” movie out of the three prequels, now I think Episode I and II are terrible except the finale of both movies, Episode III is okay but it rushes the extermination of the Jedi by the stupid “Order 66”).

The extended universe (books, comics, some of the video games) are actually far better than the movies themselves in my opinion, even if they’re some very bad books in the lot, when Lucas sold the franchise to (((Disney))) I just lost interest and said goodbye to the whole thing.

The technological aspect of Star Wars always seemed weird to me, these people have FTL capacity but rely on single shot laser pistols or rifles, the capital ships have shields but rely on old school somewhat slow-firing laser canon fire, the fighters are pretty crap (especially on the Empire side which makes no sense, I know there’s in-universe explanation for it but still)

On the ground warfare aspect of the war, any military would have just destroyed both the rebels and Empire with good old gundpowered based weapons in a minute, let a Jedi deflect good old bullets with his lightsaber, he’d have no chance in hell.

On a more serious note, did Carrie Fisher and Nathalie Portman escaped the “casting couch” that Jewish Hollywood executives impose on aspiring shiksas Hollywood stars, or did they have to go through with it even if they were Jewish, that I’d like to know. Oh and Mark Hammil is a complete nutjob if you follow his twitter rants, ironic since he is the Goy hero and certainly didn’t like what the Disney trilogy did with his character and had a few comments on the predatory nature of Hollywood, but I guess this environment just turn everyone into psychopaths.

I had no idea those things existed (I am almost military illiterate past WW2 technology), do they have videos demonstrating what they are capable of ? I guess not, not something you would reveal to the world.

Do modern armies have anything resembling functioning railguns (I think I remember the US Navy demonstrating that tech like 10 years ago) or dare I say plasma weapons ? (if those are even feasible in the “current year”).

My understanding of most balloons is they don't have onboard steering and go where the wind takes them. Not ideal for a spying device.

Someone w more knowledge about this specific device will have to elaborate on its ability or inability to steer.

Balloons have a very limited ability to steer: what they can do is go up and down, and since winds blow in different directions at different altitudes they might take advantage of that in order to go roughly in the direction they want to go. But this capability is rather imprecise and still dependent on weather – as you say, not ideal for spying.

Here are some Wiki notes/links about military laser systems including ABL which went into the megawatt range. This stuff has been around for awhile.

The AN/SEQ-3 Laser Weapon System or XN-1 LaWS[1] is a laser weapon developed by the United States Navy. The weapon was installed on USS Ponce for field testing in 2014.

In September 2014, the LaWS was declared an operational asset, so ship commanders were authorized to use it for self-defense. Humans are not a target of the weapon under stipulations of the Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons, but targets do include UAVs, helicopters, and fast patrol craft. Rules of engagement have been developed for its use, but details have not been released, although the Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons Rules of Engagement (ROE) prohibit using laser weapons against humans.

The Navy has released video of the LaWS on deployment disabling a ScanEagle UAV, detonating a rocket propelled grenade, and burning out the engine of a rigid hull inflatable boat. Officials said it is working beyond expectations.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/AN/SEQ-3_Laser_Weapon_System

The Boeing YAL-1 Airborne Laser Testbed (formerly Airborne Laser) weapons system was a megawatt-class chemical oxygen iodine laser (COIL) mounted inside a modified military Boeing 747-400F. It was primarily designed as a missile defense system to destroy tactical ballistic missiles (TBMs) while in boost phase. The aircraft was designated YAL-1A in 2004 by the U.S. Department of Defense.[1]

The YAL-1 with a low-power laser was test-fired in flight at an airborne target in 2007.[2] A high-energy laser was used to intercept a test target in January 2010,[3] and the following month, successfully destroyed two test missiles.

It appears that an advanced F-22 Raptor engaged with and prevailed against a hostile Chinese weather balloon, striking it with a missile and sending it crashing into the water below. Why an F-22 and not an F-35? The Pentagon didn't like the odds that the troubled F-35 might find itself over-matched against a weather balloon. Better safe than sorry. We're still number 1.

Well, Anon, this is another Anon. You have been misled. I am a balloon expert ! I blow them up at the Dollar store, give them out to screaming kids and then we all release them, usually at parties and so on.

I have a Phd in Balloonology, that is the study of hot air and coupled with my Masters in Psychology, I have developed a model as to how hot air affects heads resulting in a condition I call ABS (no not braking systems on cars) ie Air Brain Syndrome. Other unkind folks refer to this condition as Balloon Head. Just to clarify, this is not those devices used by Ron Jeremy, John Holmes etc.

This affliction is strangely prevalent in Washington DC. At the moment we are unable to determine the reason for the skweing.

Now that I have established my credentials , I have to advise you that balloons can be steered. China discovered chopsticks, sweet and sour dumplings and Peking Duck. These momentous discoveries are a short stride away from steering a balloon. There are tiny fans attached to the balloon and these are activated by Xi personally. An example is shown below.

As for the mission of the balloon ? They were either looking for the Corona virus or checking concentrations of Dindoos in the USA. It appears those Chinese women are hungry for the BBC and that does not stand for Barbecued Beijing Chicken.

@RoboMoralFascist 1st

Thanks, I should have known those weapons systems were already deployed, laser technology is not exactly anything new or ground breaking, but I could have swear remembering the US Navy showcasing some type of prototype railguns in like 2010/2011, might just just be my (terrible) memory playing tricks on me, I can't find anything about it, might just have been some king of standard kinetic weaponry with "intelligent" and automatic laser guidance added to it.

I have a good book knowledge of WW2 weaponry (all types, small arms, artillery, tanks, planes, warships, whatever you want) but don't know anything concrete post-war (I know about the most famous tanks and assault rifles but that's it). I used to watch quite a few guns channels on Youtube so I think I could operate a gun or rifle without too much problem, but the requirement to do so are quite harsh and complicated here in France, and you "obviously" cannot ever use them to defend yourself, even if you are near death.

Always wanted to own a MAS-36 (the last bolt action rifle ever produced in France) but I've heard they are somewhat rare and expensive, and by now most of the stock is probably in the US and not in France...

“The US military has detected a second high altitude balloon it claims to be a surveillance device belonging to China, last tracked traveling over Latin America.”

“Speaking to media on Friday, Pentagon spokesman General Pat Ryder said the second object has been assessed as “another Chinese surveillance balloon,” although this one does not appear to be headed toward the United States. The general had said hours earlier during a press briefing that the first balloon, spotted in Montana on Wednesday, was in flagrant violation of US airspace.”

<https://www.rt.com/news/570941-pentagon-chinese-spy-balloon/>

It is a meteorological/weather/atmospheric data gathering balloon. Other than shipping, cocaine ranches and broken pinatas... there is nothing to surveillance in Latin America.

I understand. I'm a WW2 V2 type of study and still shocked that the von Braun group produced over 5,000 V2 missiles before Feb 1945. These guys were 20 years ahead of everyone by far in missile development. It was von Braun that put the United States on the Moon in 1969.

The other part about these development programs like the ABL (at concept and testing, funding and design) and other lab to deployment systems is that the public knows nothing about them until years later. The American people know near nothing about biowarfare labs, BBWs, space deployment of weapons and even 'remote viewing' through dreamwork.

Historically I think of the Paris Gun with a 75 mile range from WW1. Missiles are actually considered a type of artillery. I don't want AI programs in the hands of psychopaths like the Biden crew to encourage them to a warfare insanity. It is already past the mass murder insanity threshold for these criminals.

Railguns exist in the navy. Not something they have on land, let alone anything that can be shot in an upward sort of direction.

P.S. Railguns are a total meme weapon. They're only plausibly useful for navies, but surface ships are obsolete, and you can't sink a submarine with a railgun unless they're on the surface and basically let you.

Since there is so much unemployment all Westerners should be issued with telescopes and deployed to watch the skies looking for Chinese spy balloons. There should be some service they could report to when they spot one. It should all be treated rather seriously as some kind of patriotic civic duty and they can get school children and kindergarten kids in on the act looking for balloons of the nasty evil slant eyed reds invading their skies. Australia should get in on the act too. Anyone caught idling about without a telescope staring at the sky should be severely reprimanded.
